The Flag will be True to Him

He may have naught but his army clothes,
His bundle, his scars—and his vim;
But he has been true to his country's flag,
And the flag will be true to him.

Again he will join the homeland folks
And the soldier will be no more;
And some will not know he'd been called to face
Mad hell with its thundering roar.

He may come back to a home and love
And a "job" he may call his own;
But sometimes a soldier has no kin—
And he walks thru the crowd—alone.

But the hero is sure of the stars and stripes
Whose proud colors will not grow dim;
For he has been true to the grand old flag—
And the flag will be true to him.

The Salvation Army Lass

She is only a Salvation Army Lass
In a uniform of blue:
But her heart heard the call of the battlefield—
And she answered in service true.

For Christ was The Master who ruled her soul
In the midst of the awful strife,
When Death with all of the arts of hell,
Was playing a game with Life.

And when on the crowded city streets
She asks for a helping hand,
Let us not forget what her presence meant
In the barrens of No Man's Land.

For Mercy shone like the stars at night,
In deeds that were brave and true
By the Army Lass with the soul of white
'Neath the bonnet of red and blue.
